Subject: YOU CAN'T BE SERIOUS

Hi,

I teach computer topics part time, in addition to full time work doing System Administration and part-time computer consulting. I've worked with all kinds of computers and networks for the past fifteen years.

You've got to be kidding if you're even considering that insulting Microsoft offer to pump lots of "refurbished" equipment into our poorest schools. I've worked with lots of "refurbished" equipment which has been "donated" to schools, and it always costs more in terms of System Administration time than it did in the capital expense.

How about this. Have Microsoft fund the salaries of one or two good SysAdmins for each of the schools first. For the next ten years. Then you can talk about what kind of equipment to set 'em up with.

Respectfully,
